After spotting a rare, empty storefront on a brownstone-lined street in their Cobble Hill neighborhood, it only took designers Jack and Josh Manes a week to put down a deposit. Four months later, the AD PRO Directory duo are officially opening Manes Studio, a home goods shop, custom furniture showroom, and design practice all in one. “We wanted a place of our own,” explains Josh, who established the architecture and interiors firm eight years ago with his wife. “Somewhere to let our creativity go.”

The front of the town house is devoted to retail, offering a beguiling mix of hard-to-source goods from Australian designer Greg Natale, Feelum linens from Tuscany, Soft Witness lighting and furniture, and candlestick holders from floral artist Ariel Dearie. Locally made custom furniture by Manes Studio will also be available for purchase. The central area hosts a full materials library—including samples from Dedar fabrics (Manes Studio is the only Dedar distributor in Brooklyn), Kamp Studios, and BAS Stone—while the back of the store houses the firm’s offices.
